New Executive Editor For "USN&WR"

Owen L. Scott will retire on July 1, after more than 30 years as executive editor of "U. S. News & World Report."

Succeeding him will be Howard W. Flieger, now senior associate executive editor.

The change was announced on June 20 by David Lawrence, editor and chairman of the board.

Mr. Scott has been associated with Mr. Lawrence 45 years—first with Consolidated Press Association, then with the old "United States News." He became executive editor in 1938, and in 1944 was made vice president of United States News Publishing Corporation—later to become U. S. News & World Report, Inc.

Mr. Flieger, a native of Denver, joined the magazine in 1945. He started his news career on "The Shawnee (Okla.) Morning News." After that he worked for the Associated Press in St. Louis, Kansas City, Jefferson City, Mo., and Washington, D. C. He was an AP White House correspondent during World War II.

Mr. Flieger became directing editor of the International Staff of "USN&WR" in 1948, associate executive editor in 1958, and senior associate executive editor last February. In his new capacity, he also has been named a vice president and member of the board.
